Needs Liberian Community's Support to Win $25,000 Prize

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Liberian Maimah Karmo has been awarded the prestigious honor of Women Of Worth, 2009 for her efforts to increase awareness of the issue of young women and breast cancer.

Her foundation, the Tigerlily Foundation works to educate, advocate for, empower and provide support and services to young women – before, during and after breast cancer. As a recipient, her organization will be awarded $5000.00! This amazing recognition and prize will benefit her charity immensely.

Now the Tigerlily Foundation has the opportunity to win an additional $25,000 but needs your help! There will be a public online vote for National Women of Worth beginning November 9th. Maimah needs your vote to help further the efforts of Tigerlily Foundation.

Winning an additional $25,000 donation would mean that Tigerlily Foundation will be able to do additional outreach and provide services to young women in need. Vote now at <http://www.womenofworth.com/Honorees/Honoree2009Detail.aspx?nomid=e426d0...>

Please also send this to everyone you know. As you know, a woman is diagnosed with breast cancer every 3 minutes. Young women in particular, have more aggressive breast cancers and higher mortality rates. Awareness and early detection could save a young woman's life. Please help Tigerlily Foundation win so that they can further their mission!

To learn more please visit the Women of Worth L'Oréal Facebook page and become a fan. Hurry! Voting ends November 24, 2009!
